Here We Grow Again

Good Day!

In early 2019 we entered into the world of Digital Printing, or DTG (Direct to Garment Printing). We have watched with amazement as this new in-house DTG Studio has grown steadily by leaps and bounds over the past 18 months. So much so that we decided to expand it this year!

We now have two printers running, a new GTXpro as well as a new Conveyer Belt Dryer that cures the garments after they are printed.

Not to be confused with Screen Printing, DTG Printing uses water-based ink which is safer for the environment. It is also far more affordable than screen printing for art that has multiple or gradient colors. DTG embeds the ink directly into the fibers of the garment whereas screen printing lays the ink on top of it. With proper care the longevity of a shirt printed with DTG is far longer than one that was screen printed.

Screen printing still has its place and is the more affordable option when the art you are printing has only one or two colors and for large, bulk orders. We are happy to offer both of these printing services along with our long-standing, in-house Embroidery Studio.

Here is a quick video showing a shirt being digitally printed:

We have been made aware that screen printing is now locally being referred to as “Direct Printing”. As such, we wanted to help you understand the differences between the two printing methods and hope this has been helpful.

We will always guide you to the best decorating method to elevate your brand! Just call us should you have any questions about your next project. We are here to make it effortless for you.

Wishing everyone a fabulous and safe Thanksgiving!
